

in their full glory. Words and even photographs cannot hope to describe their size and power. It's a long way from home, but it has been well worth it!

Friday 12th November

What could beat the views of yesterday? Answer: The view from Brazil, as this was the first time we were able to see the whole 275 falls in one magnificent sweep. Every turn of the path was breathtaking and then there was another warm soaking on a walkway to the middle of the river where we gazed up at the falls towering above us and, below, a nearly circular rainbow. After ascending the tower for a view from above Cliff and Eckla took to the skies in a helicopter while we enjoyed lunch.

We had time to wander through the Bird Park with amusing and friendly toucans and the spectacular scarlet ibis.

Sadly it was then time to return to the hotel for most of us to pack for the long journey home. We said goodbye to Edson who had been a wonderful guide and the Great Brazilian Adventure was over. If any reader of this should want to organise their own trip to Iguazu, we have no hesitation in recommending Edson - www.iguassufallstour.com
